

Introducing Pleasant Hill

In the mid-1900s farming remained the order of the day in Pleasant Hill. However, a community like this couldn't avoid development forever, and a well-planned community of new homes began to out-number farms.

Squarely in the center of Contra Costa County, Pleasant Hill is a successful and comfortable suburban town in the middle of what is essentially a successful and comfortable suburban county with good schools, low crime rate and affordable housing.

Pleasant Hill has several beautiful parks and is bordered by Briones Regional Park. The real growth years for Pleasant Hill occurred in the 1950s and 1960s, when returning veterans and other Bay Area newcomers made the town one of the fastest-growing communities in the Bay Area.

Today, with a recently built city hall and downtown center, Pleasant Hill has been redefining its identity, shifting from a community focused upon growth to one which places the welfare of its residents as its foremost concern.
